Santa Lucia preserve Gets Positive Nod From Park Director

Costa Rica's Director of National Parks and Preserve System toured Rancho San Carlos, the site of the future Santa Lucia Community Preserve, as part of a statewide tour and scheduled meetings with California State Park officials. The future Santa Lucia Community Preserve was chosen as a stop on the tour to demonstrate a model public/private conservancy.

The visiting Director, Carlos Manuel Rodriguez, stated "I strongly believe the proposed Santa Lucia Community Preserve project will create a new standard of land use, preservation and conservation for the future. I am truly impressed with the amount of research and planning that has been devoted to ensuring this project meets all requirements. California has been blessed with some of the most beautiful land in the world. Protection of this land and wilderness area around the world is critical not only for us, but for future generations. In Costa Rica, we are currently advocating private reserves. It is wonderful to see that it can work."

The visit by Mr. Rodriguez, which featured a tour of the 20,000 acre preserve, was arranged at the request of California Parks and Recreation Director, Don Murphy. "As part of our tour of selected parks and wilderness areas in California, we felt it was critical that Mr. Rodriguez receive a first hand look at how the citizens of Monterey County are creating innovative ways to preserve the unique and fragile resources of Rancho San Carlos," said Murphy. "The Santa Lucia Community Preserve is a model of particular significance not only to California, but the international community as well."

Suzanne Sawyer from the Santa Lucia Conservancy, Teri Strachan from the Ano Nuevo Reserve and Carlos Rodriquez, the Costa Rica's Director of National Parks and Preserve System joined other conservationists in an on-site review of the Santa Lucia preserve at Rancho Ran Carlos.

"It's a tremendous honor to have Mr. Rodriguez visit the ranch," stated Jeff Froke, Director of Resource Conservation for Rancho San Carlos. "We have put in more than six years of extremely hard work to make this a one of a kind environmental preserve and an example for future communities. We are delighted and proud to be recognized by an international expert such as Mr. Rodriguez."

The Santa Lucia Conservancy has been created in cooperation with The Trust for Public Land and will manage the Preserve Lands to provide a public access and on-going educational and interpretive programs.

Updated Information On PB Development

Most readers are now familiar with Pebble Beach Company's proposal to create a new championship golf course and 350 lots for home sites within Del Monte Forest. The proposal was submitted to the Monterey County Planning Department in 1992.

Following submission of the application, the County retained a consulting firm to prepare an Environmental Impact Report (EIR) on the proposed project, as is required by law under the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA).

The County received numerous public comments on the first Draft EIR (DEIR), released in April, 1994, questioning the substance and completeness of the document. The County then instructed its consultants to prepare a Revised DEIR (RDEIR) which was released for public comment in November, 1995.

The Sun's Water Board Report

By Elizabeth Cowley

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) received the draft report on the Carmel River mitigation program for 1991-1996 and voted to continue to administer and fund the program for another 5 years. The MPWMD mitigation program represents 40% of its annual budget.

The mitigation program was a requirement of the 1990 Environmental Impact Report for the MPWMD allocation program. The program is intended to mitigate the environmental impacts of the over-pumping of water from the Carmel River. Over 10,000 acre feet of water pumped from the Carmel River by Cal-Am was deemed illegal by the State Water Resources Control Board last year and Cal-Am is required to find a replacement source. Darby Furst, MPWMD General Manager, said the mitigation program was intended as a continuing endeavor until adequate Carmel River stream flows are achieved. Director Ely said "The best mitigation is to stop the pumping."

Henrietta Stern, MPWMD Project Manager, said the draft mitigation program report is intended to address what goals were met, the actual costs versus the estimated costs, what programs were effective and provide recommendations for the next 5 years. Stern said costs were considerably higher than anticipated, due in part to extreme weather, but that noticeable improvements were achieved in fishery resources and riparian habitat.

Director Ernst recommended that staff include a more detailed cost

Following closure of the public comment period on the RDEIR in January 1996, the County's consultants have been reviewing the public comments submitted, and will be preparing a Final EIR for review by the County's Planning Commission and approval from the Board of Supervisors.

In the RDEIR, the County's consultants have recommended that the golf course be relocated from planning areas "PQR" near the Highway 1 gate, to a location nearer The Lodge between Peter Hay Golf Course, Cypress Point Golf Course, and Spyglass Hill Golf Course.

The consultants' recommendation for relocation of the golf course also includes moving the Equestrian Center to a site adjacent to S.F.B. Morse Drive near the Highway 68 gate entrance, where a new Equestrian Center would be built. The recommendation would also necessitate relocation of a portion of the residential lots originally proposed near The Lodge area to other areas of Del Monte Forest.

At this point, although the Final EIR had been expected to be released in April, with public hearings to begin in May or June, it seems quite likely that the Final EIR will not be ready until sometime this Fall, and that the hearings on the project may not begin until late 1996.

In an effort to help people remain informed about the proposed new Golf Course and Residential Lot Development Program, Pebble beach Company's Community Affairs Department has a variety of materials available which describe the proposed project.

If you would like information about the proposed Golf Course and Lot Program, please contact Sherry Howard or Rich Patterson in the Community Affairs Department by calling 625-8420.

analysis of the various projects in the final report. Director Haddad asked staff to investigate what portions of the program could be performed by other agencies such as water quality and weather monitoring.

After receiving the draft report on the mitigation program for the past 5 years the board approved the continuation of the Carmel River mitigation program for another 5 years under the administration of the MPWMD, Directors Haddad and Ernst dissenting. Ernst voted against the 5 year continuation of the program because he wanted the program to be revisited yearly and provisions to reduce costs. Haddad opposed the district's continuation of the program because he wanted Cal-Am to take over some, if not all, of the program adding, "I am not in favor of taxpayers continuing to fund this program."

The MPWMD could have transferred the responsibility of administering and/or collecting fees to pay for the mitigation program to Cal-Am. MPWMD staff recommended that the district retain total control as they determined that there would be no cost savings or increase in service from transferring duties to Cal-Am and because the district would take on liability under the California Environmental Quality Act if Cal-Am did not sufficiently execute the mitigation program.

Patricia Bernardi, Carmel Valley Property Owners Association Director, said the mitigation program was "one of the unfortunate costs of raping the river" but added that the mitigation program was necessary and should continue to be administered by the MPWMD. Larry Foy of Cal-Am said that it did not have the staff or experience to execute the mitigation program and recommended that the MPWMD retain responsibility. Representatives from the California Native Plant Society and the Carmel River Steelhead Association also recommended that the MPWMD continue to administer the mitigation program because they felt that Cal-Am was incapable of doing so effectively.

Director Haddad said the mitigation program was redundant, as other agencies perform some of the same services, and that the program is not cost effective. Haddad calculated that the fish rescue program costs a minimum of $85 per fish rescued. Haddad repeatedly said that Cal-Am is responsible for the over-pumping and subsequent environmental damage and that it should pay for the mitigation program adding that as soon as Cal-Am stops over pumping the need for the mitigation program will go away. Haddad said that Cal-Am has included the cost of administering the mitigation program in its rate increase application to the Public Utilities Commission.

Director Hughes said "there is no free lunch" adding that water consumers were going to have to pay for the mitigation program whether it was administered by the MPWMD, Cal-Am or some other entity.

Director Ernst was opposed to approving the mitigation plan at a 5 year increment and recommended visiting the plan yearly to scrutinize costs and to try and transfer some responsibility to Cal-Am. Director Pendergrass replied that the board must approve any expenditure over $2,000 and Ernst responded that the board only adds to the plan and does not look at cutting costs.

The motion to extend the mitigation plan on a yearly basis was rejected and the motion for the MPWMD to administer and collect fees for the Carmel River mitigation program for another 5 years was approved.

Understanding Real Estate Statements of Information

What's in a name? When a title company seeks to uncover matters affecting title to real property, the answer is, "Quite a bit."

Statements of Information provide title companies with the information they need to distinguish the buyers and sellers of real property from others with similar names. After identifying the true buyers and sellers, title companies may disregard the judgments, liens or other matters on the public records under similar names.

To help you better understand this sensitive subject, the California Land Title Association has answered some of the questions most commonly asked about Statements of Information.

Q. What is a Statement of Information?

A. A Statement of Information is a form routinely requested from the buyer, seller and borrower in a transaction where title insurance is sought. The completed form provides the title company with information needed to adequately examine documents so as to disregard matters which do not affect the property to be insured, matters which actually apply to some other person.

Q. What does a Statement of Information do?

A. Every day documents affecting real property -- liens, court decrees, bankruptcies -- are recorded.

Whenever a title company uncovers a recorded document in which the name is the same or similar to that of the buyer, seller or borrower in a title transaction, the title company must ask, "Does this document affect the parties we are insuring?" Because, if it does, it affects title to the property and would, therefore, be listed as an exception from coverage under the title policy.

A properly completed Statement of Information will allow the title company to differentiate between parties with the same or similar names when searching documents recorded by name. This protects all parties involved and allows the title company to competently carry out its duties without unnecessary delay.

Q. What types of information are requested in a Statement of Information?

A. The information request is personal in nature, but not unnecessarily so. The information requested is essential to avoid delays in closing the transaction.

You, and your spouse if you are married, will be asked to provide full name, social security number, year of birth, birthplace, and information or citizenship. If you are married, you will be asked the date and place of your marriage.

Residence and employment information will be requested, as will information regarding previous marriages if you are divorced.

Q. Will the information I supply be kept confidential?

A. The information you supply is completely confidential and only for title company use in completing the search of records necessary before a policy of title insurance can be issued.

Q. What happens if a buyer, seller or borrower fails to provide the requested Statement of Information?

A. At best, failure to provide the requested Statement of Information will hinder the search and examination capabilities of the title company, causing delay in the production of your title policy.

At worse, failure to provide the information requested could prohibit the close of your escrow. Without a Statement of Information, it would be necessary for the title company to list as exceptions from coverage judgments, liens or other matters which may affect the property to be insured. Such exceptions would be unacceptable to most lenders, whose interest must also be insured.

Conclusion

Title companies make every attempt in issuing a policy of title insurance to identify known risks affecting your property and to efficiently and correctly transfer title so as to protect your interests as a homebuyer.

By properly completing a Statement of Information, you allow the title company to provide the service you need with the assurance of confidentiality.

This article was prepared by the California Land Title Association. Member companies of the California Land Title Association are dedicated to facilitating the transfer of real property throughout California and increasing the public's awareness of the value and purpose of title insurance.

Endangered

Save the whales! Save the grizzlies! Save the wolves! In the 50s and 60s Americans suddenly developed a raucous concern for the environment and its wild inhabitants.

Congress responded in 1973 with the Endangered Species Act (ESA), based on the idea that each life form may prove valuable to us, and that each is entitled to exist for its own sake. It was a bill of rights for non-humans, plant and animal, an attempt to guarantee a future for as many as possible.

And none too soon. Experts predict that if the present rate of extinction continues, at least one-third of all creatures on earth can have disappeared in thirty years.

So - how have we done? Well, the 1973 list of threatened and endangered species in the U.S. numbered 109 names. It's now well over 900, with 3700 waiting to be reviewed.

The problem has been a lack of money. Average funding for the first 18 years of the ESA has averaged about 16 cents a year for every taxpayer - one dime, one nickel, and one penny from each of our pockets.

Do we have any success stories? Well, the California gray whales have come up to about 24,000 from a low of a few thousand. Instead of killing them we now find some 300,000 people spending five-million dollars a year whale watching in California alone. Mexico has helped, and the International Whaling Commission. No longer afraid of us, gray whales now come to boats full of humans to be petted.

The bald eagle, that idol of democracy, has come from about 400 breeding pairs in the 60s to more than 4000 today. And the ban on DDT has probably saved the peregrine falcon and the brown pelican, as well as such beloveds as robins and bluebirds.

With the release near the Grand Canyon of nine condors, the Endangered Species Act, now itself endangered, should win the active support of all us civilized Americans. The rescue from extinction of this marvelous creature, the largest avian flyer in North America, with a wingspan of nine and one-half feet, a vestige of prehistoric times, has been hailed, with hundreds of telephone calls from as far away as Europe and Asia.

The listing of species as threatened or endangered is done by the Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Marine Fisheries Service. Once a species is listed no branch of the federal government may initiate a project that might harm the creature without consulting the listing agencies.

Despite the anguished howls of loggers, stock raisers, and developers, out of 98,237 consultations between 1987 and 1992 only 55 projects were blocked.

Words like "ecosystem management" and "biodiversity" are all very well - like out of a textbook somewhere - but what our endangered planet and its creatures really have going for them is our peculiarly human capacity for empathy, for identifying with our non-human fellow creatures, for caring, for loving. If we care enough we can save them, to our mutual enrichment.

Group Goes For Injunction Against Rancho San Carlos

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

On May 16, San Clemente Rancho filed an action against the Rancho San Carlos Partnership for an issuance of a preliminary injunction prohibiting the developer, its agents, employees and representatives from interfering with the free flow of traffic to and from San Clemente Rancho during the June 2 fund raising event sponsored by the Coalition to Preserve Rancho San Carlos.

The fund raising party is to be held at San Clemente Rancho, a downstream neighbor of the San Carlos. Mike and Donna Dormody, who own San Clemente Rancho, have been very active in the fight against the subdivision plan, as approved, of the historic rancho. The Dormodys own a 20' wide road easement through 3.5 miles of the San Carlos. They are concerned that the developers may interfere with the party goers as they drive through the San Carlos on the way to their San Clemente.

Mike Dormody, President of San Clemente Rancho, said that, "Based on the developers recent action in intimidating the petition gatherers, there is a good chance they will exhibit the same type of behavior to the party goers. We have visions of them harassing our guests as they enter our road. There are a lot of hard feelings out there and a party is not the place to have them exposed. We want people to come up here and observe the beauty of the place and enjoy the day, and not be barraged and intimidated by the San Carlos' mighty propaganda machine."

The main purpose of the fund raising party is to raise money to offset the extremely high price (almost $17,000) that Monterey County is charging for certifying the record for the lawsuit against the development. The County claims the record is some 16,000 pages in length to justify the high price. The lawsuit was jointly filed in March against the County by both the Coalition and the Sierra Club.

Bruce Dormody, spokesman for the Coalition explains that, "The county and the developer seem to think that they can price us out of the lawsuit market. Response to the fund raising party has been very encouraging, the community is behind us. We will be able to raise enough money to adequately fund the lawsuit no matter how many curve balls they try to throw at us."

For more information, you can contact San Clemente Rancho at 659-2111.

CalTrans Say Carmel Valley Road Is Not Their Responsibility

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

I would like to correct some misinformation in a recent editorial titled "As the River Runs, A Long and Bumpy Road", by Norman Spaulding.

Caltrans does not have any involvement in the project to install a water main on Carmel Valley Road, and subsequently is not involved in the resurfacing of the roadway once the project is completed.

Caltrans is responsible for the maintenance and operation of the State highway system in Monterey County and throughout the State. Roadways other than State highways, such as Carmel Valley Road, are constructed and maintained by the local jurisdiction in which they are located. In this case, Carmel Valley Road is the responsibility of Monterey County.

We share your interest in maintaining a safe and efficient roadway system, and we thank you for this opportunity to correct this information.

1996 deadline date was an extremely conservative date determined by our attorneys. We feel confident that Monterey County can proceed through its process in order for us to qualify for the November ballot if our signatures are turned in by the 29th. It is in the county's best interest to do so, to avoid a Special Election for this initiative", said Sally Slichter, member of PROTECT.

While PROTECT has not yet reached its goal of collecting approximately 13,000 signatures, members feel hopeful they can achieve their goal by the 29th of May. The momentum for signature gathering and interest in the petition has increased significantly in the last week. In order to qualify for the ballot, PROTECT must present to the election department approximately 9200 valid signatures. The extra 3000 to 4000 signatures provides the buffer need for signatures that will be disqualified as invalid.

Gathering signatures is a very difficult process. Many times people wishing to sign the initiative put down an address different from the address used when they actually registered to vote, or they forget to sign their name exactly as they signed when they registered, or, they think they are registered when they actually are not. Some people also feel uncomfortable signing their name to a document being circulated by someone they don't know.

As word gets out, the response from the community has been tremendous. There is a ground swell taking place, a grass roots commitment to send a message to the Board of Supervisors that Monterey County citizens will no longer tolerate a lack of respect for the Monterey County General Plan.

PROTECT is a coalition of public interest groups from throughout Monterey County. They are: the Highway 68 Coalition, SMILE (north county), The South County Coalition, Concerned Citizens of Monterey Peninsula.

In 322 B.C., when an Etruscan girl wanted to know just whom she would marry she would draw a circle on the ground, divide the circle into twenty-four sections, assign a letter of the alphabet to each section, put a kernel of corn in each, and bring out the family hen. As the hen picked up the kernels from the various sections, she would keep score of the letters and the names one might make from them. "Mr. Right" would be in there somewhere. The next step was to sacrifice the hen and dry the collarbone, and two people could make a wish on the bone by grasping one end each and snapping it. Whoever got the larger side of the snapped bone got the "lucky break."

I wonder if Etruscan culture included stock market analysts. Maybe the stock broker firm which claimed to make money "the old-fashioned way" was a bare bones operation from the very beginning. It will be hard to curb the impulse, when next inside the glass and marble offices of a prestigious broker firm, to ask where they keep the hen.

The same trip on the Internet which brought up "wishbones" also brought up Quicken's Investor Insight service, where for a monthly fee an investor can keep track of one or several stock portfolios to a dazzling extent. Share prices, number of shares and number of trades, price and volume charts for the day/week/year to date/three months/oneyear/five years, news items about the stocks selected...all there in three minutes, updated any time day or night, in full color and formatted to suit your taste. Quicken's is one of several such services available to investors on-line, and while they cannot guarantee your lucky break, they definitely can help you narrow the choices. There is even a circular pie chart report format, divided into sections, each section color coded to represent a stock you own or are researching. You need a color printer, your own bag of corn kernels, and...d'you think it would work?

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Part 11 - An introduction to computers at a naively simple level.

The first release of Windows was v1.0, and today no sane person would pay a penny for it. Version 2 was slightly better but again it received little attention. V3.0, however, made people sit up and take notice but nevertheless it still was a poor product and very "unstable", meaning that it did not take any fancy keystrokes to put the computer into a coma, or "lock it up", or "hang it up", or "crash it", as that state is usually described.

To extricate from this situation, in which the computer responds to no command at all, a combination of three keys: control+alt+delete was, and still is, used to get a "soft boot", in which the os is dumped and reloaded. Work in progress on documents that were in memory only, i.e. not saved to a disk or diskette, is lost. Occasionally the crash is so bad that the soft boot had no effect and the "hard boot" of switching the computer off and on again was necessary. In recent times a less drastic hard boot, using a reset button on the cpu, is used. Such events soon led to the practice of backing up files that are open and being worked on. Either manually or automatically the work in progress is saved periodically to the hd or fd to guard against such losses.

The last released version of the 16-bit Windows was 3.11 and even it crashes typically every hour or two under moderately vigorous use. Just recently I highlighted (selected) a sentence in Write, pressed the delete key, and it happened. It can be as simple as that. In a recent part, 8-bit, 16-bit, 32-bit, etc. systems were defined - the higher the number before the -bit the faster operations will run. About two years ago IBM released an outstanding 32 bit os called OS/2 Warp but "staid ole conservative" IBM expected the world to beat a path to its door and the release, and subsequent sales, went off like a damp squib. About a year later Microsoft released its long delayed Windows 95 to a deafening fanfare of nonsense and sold 30 millions within six months. It had expected to sell many more but the fact that it is a voracious consumer of memory meant that many pc owners would have had to shell out several hundred dollars for extra memory chips. OS/2 Warp will run very well on half of the memory required by Windows 95.

Does all the hubub about 32-bit OSs mean that your 16-bit Windows 3.11 Dos computer is now ready for the scrap heap? No way. So long as the computer runs satisfactorily, performing all the needed operations at an acceptable speed, there is no reason why it should not continue for a long time to come. But, sooner or later, a piece of software will come on the market that will have you seething with desire. In your excitement you will throw caution to the winds and submit to a wild seduction, splurge hundreds of greenbacks, come away from the experience refreshed...and maybe in trouble with your spouse and bank manager.

Operating systems are becoming more refined and are heading for "multi-threading" and "multi-tasking" in which many tasks can be carried out simultaneously and, if one of them suddenly hangs up, only that one is affected. That task (app) can be stopped, investigated, and re-started while the others continue without interruption. Unix is still by far the most popular os for pcs generally but requires considerable expertise to run and maintain. Windows NT is a newer os that is less complex but is still relatively primitive. I recently paid $700 for a copy and if I just change the address of a serial port (quiz time for you readers. What is that?) I have to shut down the whole system and re-load. We still have some way to go.

STRESS
Stress can ruin your rhythm and make you feel tired. You can relax by taking a deep breath and releasing it slowly.

Other ways to relax include holding the racket in your "off hand" between points, not squeezing the racket handle too tightly and thinking about your game plan, not your last bad shot.
